Policy, Politics, & Nursing Practice
(PPNP) is a quarterly, peer-reviewed journal that explores the multiple relationships between nursing and health policy. PPNP serves as a major source of data-based study, policy analysis and discussion on timely, relevant policy issues for nurses in a broad variety of roles and settings, and for others who are interested in nursing-related policy issues.

A Historical Perspective on Policy, Politics, and Nursing ...

As such, nurses have the potential to profoundly influence policy and politics on a global scale. In fact, it is the moral and professional obligation of nurses to be engaged in legislation that impacts their patients. When nurses influence the politics that improve the delivery of healthcare, they are ultimately advocating for their patients.

The organization makes its commitment to policy formulation clear on its website:

□ Since the work of Florence Nightingale, nurses have helped shape public, health and nursing policy. Visionary nurse leaders understood the consequences of the social, political and economic factors on the health and well being of the public.

Influence through policy: Nurses have a unique role

Political apathy in the nursing profession can be attributed to numerous factors, including a lack of knowledge of the political process and public policy formation, feelings of powerlessness, and a perceived ethical conflict between professional values and political involvement.

Moreover, policy and politics determines nursing itself – past, present and future. It profoundly shapes the practice and workplaces of nurses at local, regional, national and global levels (Salvage & White in press). Most nurses say they just want to get on with their job, and not worry about the macro-level concerns of policy and politics.
